

Audio: The Movie...The FAQ

There have been a few movies over the years that have resulted in lots of controversy and detailed study of exactly the message of the moviemakers. Some examples are Citizen Kane, A Clockwork Orange, Casablanca, Audio: The Movie and a few others. Some of these classics are so deep that they need their own FAQ. Here's ours for Audio: The Movie

Q: I know everything there is to know about audio. Do I need to get the movie?

A: No, you don't.

Q: You said it was like a college course. I was bored in college when professors just stood at the chalkboard and droned on.

A. We were too. That's why Audio: The Movie is nothing like that. There are no chalkboards, no white boards, no term papers and even no professors. It's all about the information - which is presented in a lighthearted manner.

Q: Should I make a big batch of popcorn and sit down to enjoy Audio: The Movie?

A: No, it's too intense to watch in a sitting. Instead, you'll want to watch it a chapter at a time and then think about what you learned in each chapter.

Q: One look at DC Six tells me you guys know a LOT about audio. I'm no expert, so I'll be lost with this movie, won't I?

A: Nope. We start out with the simplest concepts, use a lot of easy to understand examples and build up your knowledge bit by bit.

Q: How does the movie look? Was it shot "live".

A: Actually, the movie contains hundreds of pictures, animations, audio examples, screen shots, and a multitrack audio score with a lively instructor. There is even 4 seconds of full motion video.

Q: All I want to do is get better with Diamond Cut. Will this help?

A: If you can get thru all the information in Audio: The Movie and not be better with ANYTHING you do with audio, we'd be very surprised.

Q: What's the best part of Audio: The Movie

A: In our opinion it's the examples. Few folks would think of using a tomato crop to explain dB measurements or dogs playing poker to show how MP3 compression works. However, this is how our brains work and we think it helps a lot in understanding these audio concepts.

Q: I'm just an average person. Will I learn a lot?

A: Yes, you will. You'll, in fact, be amazed with how much you learn. And how easy it is. And how much fun it'll be.
